He had the biggest heart for helping people. He touched their lives and made a difference, and been a Angel from heaven to many of them in a time of need. He was gifted with skills to fix just about anything and enjoyed doing so. He has touched my life in many ways. I looked up to my Uncle Horace growing up. He was also doing something and using tools that caught my eye and interest. He also had a fun and funny side he would share with his family and close friends. I loved listening to his stories growing up and even not that long ago. He taught me many things. Uncle Horace, I miss you. I miss you more then you may have known I would. I will always think about you and remember you and all you have done for me and taught me. You were one of my Heroes. To my cousins, family, and his friends, I pray that god gives us the strength to deal with our lost, and become a little like him by having a big helping heart. Heaven gained another great man.
